

ABSTRACT

A process for fabricating phase-change elements having ultra small cross-sectional areas for use in phase change memory cells specifically and in semiconductor devices generally in which pads are implemented to create horizontally aligned phase change elements is disclosed. The elements thus 5 defined may be used within chalcogenide memory cells or other semiconductor devices.